BUCKI'S WARM LOVE.

He Pleaded with His Wife to Make Up Differences.

She Retorted that Affection Was Exhausted.

Witnesses Tell of a Life That Was Mostly Spice.

Mr. Bucki's direct examination was continued by Lawyer McCurdy, Witness was asked as to the allegation made by his wife that her husband and a party of friends got drunk at a dance in Hodgeson Hall, on Forty-fifth street. "Well, as to that," said Mr. Bucki, "at my wife's request I gave a little dinner to twenty-four people at my house, 116 West Seventy-second street, and afterwards had a dance at Hodgeson Hall, All the drinking that was done was done in my house."

"Was there any wine at the hall."

"I think there were three bottles drunk among the whole crowd. My wife and I went home in a carriage with Mr. Hirsch, a friend. We all three sung on the way home, but we were not greatly elevated."

The much-talked of William, the but-left, was next called. He said his name was called up their ears in expectation of some interesting details regarding the internal affairs of the Bucki household. But after Lawyer heard his master abuse Mrs. Buckl and had answered "No" in a very weak voice, he was allowed to go. He retired smiling broadly.

whole business about the protection that United States Commissioner Shields this is alleged to have been accorded by afternoon.

The witness admitted that he was interested in various city contracts, among them the Aqueduct and street cleaning contracts, prior to his leaving New York for Canada.

He was examined at considerable length on the testimony given by him in the former trial of the case, regarding certain business transactions which he had with George J. Caulfield, who was formerly Commissioner of Jurors. He had lent Caulfield small sums at various times, aggregating several thousand dollars in all. There were several contradictions in his testimony at that time, and these were brought out by the crossexaminer.

Mr. Keenan said that Caulfield had reimbursed aim partially for those ceived from Upington the $48,000 said to be responsible for his client's appearance before Commissioner Shields this morning. The Marshal seemed satisfied that the promise would be fuffilled, and returned home.
